

Your Legacy

What will your legacy look like after your passing? Can we put the wheels in motion today so we will be remembered fondly?

I say yes. If you do your very best daily to be kind, considerate and loving to everyone you meet, it will have an everlasting effect on your legacy.

We, as humans, are here on earth for a very short time. Our birth is marked in the country of birth as we start our life on earth. How we live determines our legacy. It's not what we're handed as we travel life's path, but what we do with this gift of life.

Some of us will squander it. Some of us will do nothing but sit on it like the son given the coins who proceeded to bury them.

Let's make a difference. Let the neighbours see just how we proceed to take our gifts and multiply them. Share whatever you've been given with whoever needs a hand up. Sometimes it's not the wheel that is squeaking that needs the grease but someone who is sitting quietly by waiting for that little bit of a boost to make it through the day.

Smile, say hello, and ask your neighbour how they are. Stop and listen, maybe they need an ear that's willing to share their load. Sometimes that is all a person needs. Take time and be there for them.

Sharing and caring are the cornerstones to making someone feel that they're special. You, the giver, will feel that you've made a difference and the person that shared their burden will feel so much better.

There are so many people who need this in today's world. Seek them out. Let them know you care. It makes this world a much better place in which to live.

You can look around and see people who generally care going out of their way daily to make someone's life worth living. Be that someone.

Life has a way of rushing by. Slow down as they say, 'stop and smell the roses'. Listen to the birds sing. See the buds popping and the plants coming to life after the cold winter months.

We need to come alive after this Lenten season. Put on a new cloak. Watch as Spring explodes and the Easter season brings new hope and life to our faith.

Let's go through Lent and Palm Sunday renewing our faith and becoming more Godlike. See the world in a new light. Life renews each year, so let's renew our commitment to faith.

Be the person whose legacy will live on. The kinder, gentler, giving person of whom people will say 'Job well done. They walked the path of life full of joy, faith, love, charity and a belief in God.'

As you do unto others so you shall be rewarded accordingly.

God Bless as you walk your path to eternity.
